Lecturer Positions

The University of Vermont Department of Religion invites applications for two one-year lecturer appointments in Comparative Religion for the academic year 2007-08. Each position carries an eight-course load for the academic year, four courses each semester, all at the undergraduate level.

The courses taught each semester will include three sections of an Introduction to the Study of Religion comparing multiple religious traditions or surveying selected Asian traditions, and one intermediate-level course on a topic related to the appointee's scholarly specialization. Applicants with teaching competence in Islamic and Hindu traditions are of particular interest for one of the appointments. Graduate training in the academic study of religion is required; teaching experience is preferred.

Candidates may apply either directly to the address below or online at www.uvmjobs.com (position #031787) and include in that application a curriculum vitae and the names of three references. In addition, graduate transcripts should be sent to: Kevin Trainor, Chair; Department of Religion; 481 Main Street; The University of Vermont; Burlington, VT 05405. Questions should be addressed to Professor Trainor at kevin.trainor@uvm.edu.
